

Lucky Cat and the Gang

Product Code: 10150

Availability: 1

Weight: 0.00kg

Dimensions: 0.00cm x 0.00cm x 0.00cm

Price: $67.00

Short Description

Lucky Cat and the gang

with tray colorful handpaint design Thai benjarong table gift & décor.

Description

Lucky Cat and the gang

with tray colorful handpaint design Thai benjarong table gift & décor.

Description

- High quality ceramic
- Exquisite pattern of Thai art? origin?
- Enamels multicolor?
- Trimmed with real gold liquid

* Enamels? color? processing? is painting after that, bake it? 800?-1,000degree? temperature? again. The colors on the product are more durable than conventional paints.

Lucky? Cat (beckoning cat)?

Asian? people often believe?d that they will bring good luck to owner? when they raised their hands. It means calling for money and good luck. we preferable to put them in a house or shop.

Approximate? Dimension

one set includes?

- Lucky cat: W: 2", L: 2.5", H: 3.25"
- His friend?s: W:1.75", L:2", H: 4"
- W: 1.75", L: 2", H: 3.75"
- Wood tray: W: 7", L: 7"

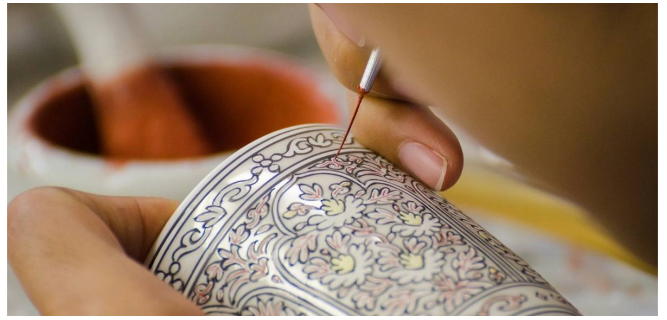

History

Origins of Benjarong

Benjarong means „five colors“. Originally these have been red, yellow, green, blue and white but as time passed, it was mixed also with secondary colors. Thai benjarong ware is unique style of enamels color on a white porcelain which has its origins from Ming dynasty china (1368-1644).

Royal porcelain

In the 13th to 18th centuries, when Chinese traders came to Thailand, they brought with them their beautiful porcelain. This was popular with the royalty and was imported from China. Local Thai artisans drew a pattern and sent it to China (Sino-Thai wares). Later they discovered kaolin clay, which is one of the most important materials. The first Thai Benjarong was made during the reign of King Rama V. Benjarong was allowed to be used only by kings and wealthy merchants. Nowadays, thanks to the permission of King Rama IX, Benjarong is available for everyone.

Product Gallery

