About Teak

Teak has always been a prized material. Tree of teak come from Tectona grandis, is native to tropics such as Thailand, Burma, Malaysia.

An abundance of natural oils and rubber right into the tight grain of the wood. All wood contain oils that protect the tree.

Teak has greater naturally weather resistant properties than just about any type of wood. When dried to a proper moisture level. The oil and rubber protect the heart of the wood from invaders like fungi and parasites that can destroy other woods. This is reason that Teak is valuable both for its elegance and its durability. Beyond its beautiful, it also possesses some natural properties that other wood don't have.
